Answer Is Given

In answer, the Changchun authorities have granted the first demand, but concerning the second have informed the consul that the question of opening two cities in Kirin as treaty ports is a matter that must be taken up by the Japanese legation with the Central Government at Peking.

BRITISH MISSION CHIEF TELLS NEEDS IN RUSSIA

Calls Denikin's Achievements Miraculous And Declares He Is Strong Patriot

(Reuter's Service)

London, July 17.—Major-General Sir Charles Briggs, the chief of the British Military Mission in South Russia, has just returned from General Denikin's headquarters.

Interviewed by a representative of Reuter's Agency, he emphatically contradicts the reports circulated against General Denikin's administration and declares that General Denikin is a large-minded, strong Russian patriot who is not swayed by any personal ambitions.

The heads of the British, French and American Missions formulated the following program in conjunction with General Denikin's administration and it was signed by all, clearly proving the nature of General Denikin's policy:

The abolition of Bolshevik anarchy; the reconstruction of a united Russia; convocation of a Peoples' Assembly based on universal suffrage; decentralisation by means of a wide regional autonomy and liberal local self-government; guarantees for full civil and religious freedom, immediate agrarian reforms with a view to meeting the demand for land of the working classes; and immediate labor legislation to secure the working classes from exploitation by the government or capital.

General Briggs added that our duty was to help general Denikin and Admiral Koltchak. Eighty-five percent of the whole population of Russia was anti-Bolshevist; five percent consist of Commissaries; five percent of highly paid assassins to carry out the orders of the Commissaries; and the remaining five percent are doubtful. Owing to Soviet propaganda, the Russian people are led to believe that France and England are behind the Bolshevists.

The work accomplished by General Denikin during the past fifteen months was miraculous. It was unfortunate Admiral Koltchak had been forced back, but this was only a passing phase. It must be remembered that the troops in the front line of the Red Armies are driven to fight and kept at their post by machine-guns controlled by paid assassins, who remain in the rear.

General Briggs concluded by emphasising the necessity of quickly assisting the anti-Bolshevists by re-opening trade with the re-conquered territory, otherwise Germany would re-capture the whole Russian trade and influence. The urgency of this was clear as General Denikin had already re-conquered a tract of country with a population of sixty millions which had previously been devastated by the Bolsheviks.

Smuts, Departing For Home, Urges Moderation To Foe And Advises Reconciliation

In Farewell Speech He Declares Conditions In Europe Are Awful And Call For Relief Work From Britain And America

(Reuter's Service)

London, July 17.—General Smuts in a valedictory statement on the eve of his return to South Africa, expresses the warmest thanks to the British people for the last two and a half years, who did not hesitate to honor and trust one who had been their former enemy. He argues himself as an example for realising the necessity to practice moderation in the expression of feelings towards those who yesterday were our bitterest enemies. He declares the protest cabled on the 29th has evoked a vast correspondence showing widespread agreement with his views.

Is Field For Rescue

After showing how great ideals of progress had won through against attacks of scientific materialism, General Smuts proceeds to plead for reconciliation. He describes the present condition of Europe as the most awful spectacle in history and evocative of the deepest emotion. Europe will be the greatest mission field for rescue work in which Britons and Americans can spend their energies. In this generation a stable Europe is impossible without a stable Germany. The appeasement of Germany therefore is of cardinal importance. In his opinion the present German Republic deserves British encouragement and support for it has done unexpectedly well in preventing both anarchy and military reaction. It has stood in the breach for months fighting the battle of European order against the growing forces of anarchy. The great issue would probably be decided in Germany for good and all.

General Smuts advocates leaving Russia to her own salvation, the removal of the blockade and the adoption of all-round neutrality, benevolence, and importiality.

Freedom In Near East

After referring to the successful launching of the dominions on a great career, which will forever rank as one of the outstanding achievements of British political genius, he advocates the realisation without delay of the principles of freedom and self-government for India and Egypt, which is essential for the existence of the Empire. Obviously the dominion solution will not apply, but he adumbrates suggestions for replacing the bureaucratic domination.

Continuing, General Smuts said the pressing constitutional problem is the Irish question. He dwells on its effects on the Empire and America and calls attention to the urgent need of a settlement.

Finally he reviews the domestic situation and pleads for the new, broader and kinder spirit which has emerged from the recent war.

VLADIVOSTOK SHIPPING PARALYSED BY STRIKE

Harbin's Financial Situation Growing Desperate With Living Costs Soaring

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Harbin, July 23.—News from Vladivostok states that the strike of the Volunteer Fleet continues, the sailors believing that the management is sure to fulfil their claims, as it is evident that their wages are insufficient.

Life in the port of Vladivostok is dead. Many steamers, even with passengers on board, have not left port, and some steamers are guarded by troops in order to prevent a conflict between the sailors and the management. At present, however, the strike is of a peaceful character.

The management is discussing the situation and is evidently preparing to meet all the claims of the employes.

The financial situation in Harbin is growing desperate and the local press is urging the necessity of taking immediate measures for improving the rouble, the fall of which is ruining the Russian population.

All increases in wages are proving insufficient owing to the extraordinary growth in the prices of goods of the first necessity.

SHANTUNG EVANGELISTS JAILED BY JAPANESE

Three Thrown Into Cells By Soldiers For Possession Of Harmless Tract

(China Press Correspondence)

Weihsien, Shantung, July 21.—Our usual Summer Bible School for evangelists finished a profitable session a week ago. An incident connected with its closing may have some general interest. Three evangelists, departing from the meeting for their several fields of work at a small railway station to the east of this, decided to take a train for a part of their journey.

Arrived at the station they were at once challenged as th what their business was. They replied, "Christian preachers." At once all their belongings were searched. Upon one of them was found one small leaflet on the love of country, which some one had given him, (for the mission does not circulate any political literature). It was nothing more than a hymn or poem urging all Chinese to love of country, and in it was no other mention of Japan, than the sentence that every effort should be made by China to save Tsingtau to China.

But this was a grave crime in the eyes of the gendarmes. The possessor was at once seized. He was so unfortunate as to ask the others to tell his family, when they too were seized, and the three taken to the Japanese court at Fangtzi, and put into small, hot, dark, prison cells, where they were confined for three days.

They were compelled to pay for their own food, one dollar apiece being charged them for that time. They had neither bed nor chair, and were allowed no communication with the outside world, though they managed to rip off a pocket from a garment, and write me a note, apprising me of their predicament, which was gotten out to me by stealth. At the second appearance before the examining officer they were treated to a tirade against Christianity. He told them that the Japanese were the ones who really loved China, and they were the dupes of the American missionaries. It can be imagined how convincing these professions of love would be, reinforced as they were by three days of unjust confinement in a hot dark prison cell.

BIG STRIKE IN TOKIO

Another Tokio telegram says that in view of the scarcity of rice and the general high cost of foodstuffs, the Government railways yesterday decided to charge no freight for the transportation of cereals between Japanese cities. Only 30 percent of the previous freight rate is to be charged in the case of potatoes.

BRITISH COAL INCREASE TO BE MADE EFFECTIVE

Bonar Law Makes Statement Following Miners' Refusal To Accept Proposal

(Reuter's Service)

London, July 18.—The miners' refusal to accept Mr. Bonar-Law's offer has caused an unfavorable impression. This decision was taken despite an eloquent appeal by Mr. William Brace, who emphasised that the 6/- increase was catastrophic for the miners themselves.

London, July 18.—Replying to Mr. J. R. Clynes, Mr. A. Bonar Law stated in the House of Commons today, that, in consequence of the decision of the Miners' Federations not to accept his offer, the six shillings increase per ton in the price of coal would operate from the 21st.

He had noted, he said, that the Miners Representatives in the House of Commons had carried out their undertaking to recommend acceptance by the Miners of the proposal of the Government and he added that the Government's action did not preclude the possibility of an opportunity for negotiating a settlement, but that did not alter the fact that any delay in making price of coal equivalent to its cost would be fatal.

It concluded: "the maintenance of peace places a solemn duty on America, England and France, who now become the underwriters of the peace of the world."

General Pershing replied that America came in against autocracy and militarism. A new spirit of comradeship had arisen out of the common suffering and he hoped the two great nations would act in common in future.

LEAVE TO APPEAL DENIED IN J. T. HAMMOND CASE

British Full Supreme Court Rules Against Shanghai Real Estate Man

Mr. J. T. Hammond's application for leave to appeal to the Privy Council from the recent decisions against him in cases brought against L'Epargne Franco-Chinoise was denied by the British Full Supreme Court, consisting of Sir Havilland de Sausmarez and Judge Skinner Turner yesterday.

The matter had been adjourned from a previous hearing to allow the appellant to file an affidavit in order to show that the matter in dispute involved a sum of over £500. This the court held he failed to show. Sir Havilland, in the course of the lengthy judgment, emphasised that the principle to be applied was that laid down in a Canadian appeal case where it was stated that a case ought not to be appealed unless it was one of gravity and substantial character.

There had not been the least practical suggestion that the defendant's tenancy had in any way been jeopardised by the action of the plaintiff and the Judge was of opinion that the matter in dispute had no money value at all.

When judgment had been given Mr. Hammond intimated that he would appeal direct to London and brought up the question of whether he ought to be compelled to pay costs, since if the appeal court decided in his favor he would probably not be able to get them back again. Sir Havilland stated that no further stay could be granted and when the appellant commenced to argue that the plaintiffs had no right, while conducting a business "which was illegal under British law," to come into court, the court left the bench.

$1,000 Damages Awarded In Suit Against Chamber

Mixed Court Gives Judgment In $100,000 Libel Action Against Chinese Commercial Body

By a judgment handed down in the Mixed Court yesterday the sum of $1,000 damages was awarded the plaintiff in the $100,000 libel suit brought against the Chinese General Chamber of Commerce and Mr. Chu Pao-san, its chairman, by the Chen Yu Products Company.

The case came before Assessor Grant Jones and Magistrate Li. Mr. N. C. Home appeared for the plaintiff and Mr. Reader Harris and Mr. G. D. Museo for the defendants.

In giving judgment the Assessor said:

"In this action plaintiff seeks to recover from the Chinese Chamber of Commerce damages for an alleged libel which was published in the Sin Wan Pao on December 11, 1917, and four following days. Defendants admit publication and plead privilege.

"It appears that some seven years ago plaintiff established the Chen Yu Products Factory with head office at No. 544 Honan Road and branches in other ports. The business of the firm was largely conducted by mail orders. For a long time prior to December, 1917, defendants had been in receipt of numerous complaints from various outports as to extensive frauds practised by bogus commercial concerns in Shanghai in obtaining money from merchants in such outports with mail orders for goods which they subsequently failed to supply. Defendants sought to check these malpractices by private inquiries and by recourse to the police authorities without success, and had consequently incurred rebuke from the mercantile community and other Chambers of Commerce. On December 10, 1917, defendants received from a certain Li Tzu-yai of the Chinese Bund the letter of complaint which forms the subject of this action, and which, unless justified, is undoubtedly libellous. Defendants deputed a member of their committee, since deceased, to make inquiries of the writer, and as a result of these inquiries and in the last resort decided to publish the letter with the object, they assert, of giving the persons implicated an opportunity to come forward and refute the allegations. The names of several other concerns, of which complaint had likewise been received, were suffixed to the letter and it is a remarkable thing that of these not one has taken up the challenge. Plaintiff saw the advertisment on December 11. He consulted a friend and went to the Chamber two days later. There he was shown the original letter and asked to write a letter of explanation. He wrote on the 14th and his reply was duly published by the Chamber in the Sin Wan Pao of December 15 together with the letter of complaint. Publication of the letter then ceased while plaintiff's explanation was continued for a few more days. All these publications were at the expense of the Chamber. Some months later, in the summer of the following year, negotiations took place between the parties in which a payment of $2,000 to plaintiff was suggested but rejected by both sides, by plaintiff apparently on the ground that he had already incurred considerable legal expenses and by defendants because they considered they had acted and had done all that was required of them by way of reparation. Defendants heard nothing more of the matter until they were served with the writ in this action at the end of the year, that is to say, a full twelve months after the publication of the libel.

"In this petition plaintiff claims general damages for injury to his credit and reputation in his business and in his social standing. He further claims special damages on the ground that he has been unable to collect his outstanding accounts and that his business has deteriorated in bulk. Special damages are such as the law will not infer from the nature of the words themselves; they must be claimed on the pleading and evidence of them must be given at the trial. What evidence has been given? None but the bare word of the plaintiff supported by the vague testimony of an obscure witness from Soochow. Plaintiff tells us he has suffered loss at Wuhu, his Hankow Branch is in liquidation, his Tientsin branch has closed its doors, Messrs. Jardine, Matheson Co., have ceased to purchase his wares. Not a book has been produced to us in support of his statement, not a witness from the ports and parties concerned though there has been ample time to procure them ever since the commencement of the hearing. This disposes, I think, of the claim of special damages, and it does more than that; it reacts upon the general claim. For that claim must bear some relation to the damage actually suffered by the plaintiff; in the absence of express malice it cannot derive its full force from the act of defendants alone. The law indeed presumes such damages as are the natural or probable consequences of defendant's conduct and they may be recovered wherever the immediate tendency of the words is to impair the plaintiff's reputation although no actual pecuniary loss has in fact resulted. But the circumstances attending the publication must be taken into account. Defendants accepted with alacrity plaintiff's explanation, and this fact goes to confirm their alleged object in publication. That explanation itself makes admission of malpractices by former employes of plaintiff and that the complaints were not altogether groundless, so much so that plaintiff had thought of taking measures to deal with these abuses. The Chairman and Vice-Chairman of the Chamber gave it as their opinion, and their opinion is entitled to respect and is substantiated to a certain extent by the customs of the country, that the publication of the explanatory letter would delete the impression produced by the original advertisement. The retraction, if it may be so termed, was made as publicly as the charge and as far as possible to the same persons, but a contradiction, however, widely circulated, will not reach all those who have read the libel. It is in defendants' favor that in repeating the story they gave it as hearsay and stated the source of their information. Their object was to protect the public from fraud and though this, unless clothed by the law in privilege, is no defense, it does operate in mitigation of general damages, and therefore to make it more incumbent upon plaintiff in his own interests, to prove such special damages as he may have suffered. I do not think that defendants are entitled to claim privilege in this case. The complaint of the Chamber would, in the absence of express malice, possibly be privileged; not so the use the Chamber made of it. It is seldom that any privilege attaches to any indiscriminate publication in a newspaper, unless indeed there was no other way in which defendants could adequately discharge the duty which they owe to society, and in this case there was another way enjoined upon them by the law of such associations as theirs. They should have instituted a more thorough investigation into the facts and the result of such investigation would surely have been either non-publication of the letter, or a plea of justification in the present suit. One result of such a hasty and one-sided course of action as was here adopted must be to expose any man, however honest, to the malice of his enemies. Defendants could and should have tried to reach plaintiff before publication, and they should, as things were, have stayed publication of the libel from the date of plaintiff's personal protest. Taking all these facts into consideration we order and adjudge that plaintiff do recover from defendant damages in the sum of $1,000.

"Costs follow the event unless the Court shall for good cause otherwise direct, and good cause may be found either in the conduct of the parties or in the facts of the case. On both these grounds we decline to make the usual order."

U. S. LEGATION DENIES REPORT OF RAIL LOAN

Agreement With Peking Told Of In Tokio Message Does Not Exist

(From Our Own Correspondent)

Peking, July 21.—Regarding the press report from Tokio, dated July 17, that an agreement has been reached between the Peking Government and a number of American capitalists for a loan amounting to Yen 50,000,000 for the extension of the Chinchou-Aigun railway and for harbor works at Lienshan bay, the American Legation officially denies that any steps have been taken by American nationals toward such a loan.

When the Chinchou-Aigun railway was undertaken some years ago, the Chinese government granted to an American group of banks and to an English group an option on the branch line to Lienshan Bay and for harbor works at Hulutao, should such an enterprise be undertaken when the Chinese Government itself was unable to wholly finance it. The American group included the Morgan interests which now head the American group of the new financial Consortium. Presumably, therefore, if the question of taking up the option on such a branch railway came up, it would be handled through the international Consortium. No action is contemplated, anyway, at present.

T.K.K. Line Steamship May Cut Out Hawaii

Siberia Will Be First To Do So If Arrangement Is Practicable

The Toyo Kisen Kaisha is arranging to inaugurate a direct passenger and freight service from Japan to San Francisco without calling at Hawaii, says the Japan Advertiser.

Of the four large steamers now operated by the Toyo Kisen Kaisha on the San Francisco run, the Tenyo Maru, the Shinyo Maru, and the Korea Maru are subsidised by the Government, and it is impossible for the company to change their ports of call without permission from the authorities. The Siberia Maru is, however, free, and the Toyo Kisen Kaisha contemplates opening a direct service from Japan to San Francisco with her.

"If a number of passengers together with freights sufficient to fill the holds of the Siberia Maru are obtainable at Kobe and Yokohama, the project will be carried into effect from about November. It will considerably shorten the time required for the trans-Pacific voyage, the distance being covered in twelve days and nights. Hitherto the Siberia Maru have made five round trips between Japan and America a year, but as the result of the abolition of the call at Hawaii the number of annual trips will be increased to seven. The new arrangement will, therefore, be beneficial to the company as well as to passengers and shippers, but it will adversely affect the service to Hawaii. It is believed that if the test proves satisfactory, the three other steamers may also be placed on the direct service if the permission of the authorities can be secured. The realisation of the proposed plan depends, however, upon the number of passengers and the amount of cargo obtainable at Yokohama and Kobe.

Chinese Militarists Plan Aggression In Mongolia

Army Being Sent In And Colonisation Projected In Violation Of Russian Agreement

(From Our Own Correspondent)

Peking, July 20.—The Mongolian enterprise is well launched from Peking now with the publication among the latest mandates of the regulations governing the office of the High Commissioner for the Defense of the Northwestern frontier which were passed by the Chinese Parliament last week after a row which resulted in a fist fight over a point of order. General Hsu Shu-cheng, the commissioner, "specially appointed" by the President, according to the term of the regulation, is given the very widest powers.

The Mandate states that the Commission is for the purpose of "the defense and development of various local enterprises on the northwestern frontiers." In the second article it is stated that the "Commissioner. . . shall draw up plans for the development for the various local enterprises relating to communications, land cultivation, cattle raising, forestry, mining, salt-petro quarrying, commerce, education, and military defense affairs in the various localities." It further states that resident generals shall consult with, receive orders from and assist the High Commissioner, and that in cases where neighboring provinces and boundaries are concerned in the affairs, that the highest military authorities or tuchuns shall be consulted. Further clauses provide for establishment of an office and for the submission of the Commissioner's regulations for his office to the Government.

Little Hsu Busy

Already the operations for which this mandate provides have been begun by Little Hsu and his henchmen. The forces of the War Participation army have practically been made over into the new Northwestern Frontier Defense Army, as can be proved by tracing the movement of the actual brigades composing these two bodies. Within the last few weeks advices from foreigners in Kalgan report the arrival of 5,000 troops of the former War Participation Army at this post. Some of these troops have been sent on into Mongolia, two detachments having arrived at Udde, the border town on the road from Inner into Outer Mongolia. Other troops, making up nearly the whole 7,000 troops of the War Participation Army, have been stationed permanently at Kalgan, where barracks are being erected for them, and at Suiyuan, near the Mongolian border. Military authorities estimate that four brigades of the original army raised under General Tuan Chi-jui by means of the Japanese War Participation loan of Yen 4,000,000 have been transferred to the command of Little Hsu.

These troops will reinforce the guard of the Chinese Resident Commissioner at Urga which itself increased last June from the authorised number of 200 to 700.

Motor Service Working

So much for the 'defense' of the northwest. For its development plans are being made and vast capital laid out. The much heralded motor transport service from Kalgan to Urga for the carrying of troops and supplies up to the plateau of Outer Mongolia has actually been put into operation. Ford and Dodge American cars, carried up on the Kalgan railway, were filled with men and began their long journey of 700 miles to Urga. News came through from Kalgan yesterday, however, that in getting up the pass above Kalgan in the rain-washed roads the motor vans broke down and the troops were now engaged in vain attempts to haul their transports out of the mire.

Besides the motors which were bought from an American firm, a fleet of old style Handley-Page airships and extensive wireless equipment have been bought from the Peking Syndicate along with various other railway stock, implements and supplies. The Japanese, it is believed, were willing to contribute arms, in addition to the capital which supports these armies, to the enterprise, for only a few weeks ago requests came in from the Chinese government that Japanese firms should be allowed to sell them firearms in violation of the arms embargo agreement. The wireless may conceivably be used for military communications in the vast distances of Outer Mongolia. The airships, however, which are supposed to be destined to supplement motor vehicles for commercial purposes are really fit for little but bombing and are inadequately manned and in bad shape for use.

To Build Military Railways

The National Defense department also, it is reported, plans the construction of light military railways to facilitate communications. According to the plans, the first two lines to be constructed shall be: one from Hsuanhuafu west-ward to Peiyangkow and northwest to Kueihua; second, from Kalgan northeastward to Dolonor, crossing the Wukeerh Railway Survey, and investigation is to be commenced at once under direction of the Bureau of Communications.

One may ask how this huge plan is to be financed by a nearly bankrupt government. The troops, of course, are still supported on the Japanese war loan. The other projects Hsu plans to finance apparently by means of a new Chinese bank he is promoting. This bank is to be launched with a capital of $20,000,000, to be subscribed by the various tuchuns.

The railway project is the newest development in the history of this astonishing campaign, and it is expected to call forth a second protest from the Russian Legation against movements in Mongolia directly violating Russo-Chinese agreements.

As a sequel to the Russo-Chinese agreements of 1898, the question of the special rights of Russia in the construction by the Chinese government of railways to the north of Peking was formulated in a note from the Tsung-li Yamen to the Russian Minister in May, 1899, being later explained and confirmed finally in 1905 when the intention of the Chinese government to construct the Peking-Kalgan railway materialised. These agreements bind the Chinese government absolutely to enter into a previous agreement with the Russian government on with a syndicate with a view to granting them the construction, in the event that railway should hereafter be constructed in a north or northeasterly direction from Peking toward the Russian frontier (with the exception that the railway should be constructed with Chinese money by Chinese officials).

Agreements Are Violated

The whole text of Russo-Chinese agreements threatens to be violated by the proposed campaign. After the Russo-Mongolian treaty of 1915, directly following the declaration of war, by which Russia recognised the autonomy of Mongolia, a tripartite agreement was entered into between Russia, China, and the local Mongolian Government by which the autonomy of Outer Mongolia under Chinese suzerainty was declared, the Russian right to free trade across the Mongolian frontier was confirmed and a Russian resident Commissioner was established at Urga with a guard of 150 men and a Chinese with a guard of 200 men. China also agreed not to colonise Mongolia.

It now seems evident that China is about to take advantage of the weakness of Russia to seize her former power over Mongolia. The Mongolians themselves, say foreign advisers and merchants who are in touch with local Mongol princes, simply desire to be left alone by both parties. They are a peace-loving nomadic people, devoted to the lowing of their flocks over the grassy plains of the northwest. It is said in diplomatic circles, however, that the priestly class, who, under the Dalai Lama, a Tibetan and the real ruler of Outer Mongolia, are the party in power in Mongolia, have lately dissipated their rights with the princes and are seeking Peking intervention. This report also claims a Japanese Buddhist interest in the priests' cause.

If the Mongolians themselves do not want Chinese intervention and colonisation and development, why should the movement be undertaken?

Two reasons discount the explanation that the campaign is an excuse on the part of northern militarists for the use and concentration of the northern army. First because the troops are being sent as fast as possible up into Far Mongolia where they will not be available for use in strategic campaigns in North China. Second, because the movement is fully as much a commercial and development project as military.

Among the Chinese themselves various reasons are given. One general on Little Hsu's staff has stated that the army will be demobilised in Mongolia when their term of enlistment is up and set to work in colonising projects for the good of the country. Obviously, the probability of disbandment is small; soldiers do not make good colonisers, and the "defense of the northwest frontier" entails no such project.

Bolshevik Menace False Alarm

The government has several times advertised the Bolshevik menace to Mongolia. The Bolshevik scare, first set in motion from the Russian Legation in Peking, is now poohpoohed universally in Legation circles. The type of civilisation in Outer Mongolia is utterly unconducive to socialistic movements, and no traces whatever of Siberian Bolshevist organisers penetrated into the vast deserts and open spaces of the Mongolian plateau can be found.

The danger of a Pan-Mongolian independence movement, under the Cossack general Semenoff, is also given as an excuse for armed activity in Mongolia. Foreigners at Urga reported at a few weeks ago that Semenoff was ready with a force of Chinese soldiers to oppose the Chinese army should it advance on the road from Udde to Urga. Later it was reported that Semenoff has despatched messages to the officials at Urga to rally round him for the preservation of the independence of Mongolia.

Yesterday it was positively stated to me from responsible sources that Semenoff is not in Outer Mongolia but in Trans-Baikalia, stationed at Chita. Certainly the two Chinese divisions arrived lately in Outer Mongolia have encountered no opposition from Semenoff forces. It is also stated that since Semenoff announced his allegiance to the Koltchak government a month ago he has given up his Mongolian plans and concentrated his attention on stabilising his power in Trans-Baikalia where his Buriat Army was raised and is now supported.

In other quarters it is said Japanese intrigue is at work with all three parties. Semenoff, the Mongolian priestly class and the Chinese militarists, with the object of stirring up trouble on China's northwest which shall weaken that disordered country even further. There is little reason to suppose, however, that the Japanese would enlist on such a wild escapade so far from the center of things, nor do their actions in opposing the lifting of the arms embargo and in refusing further aid to Semenoff encourage such speculations.

In some quarters the English and the American nationals are accused equally with the Japanese of inciting trouble, since business concerns of these two nations have sold goods to the Northwestern Frontier Commission, an institution supported, presumably, on Japanese capital through the Japanese War Participation loan. These interprises are of course private and of a non-military character.

On the whole it seems plain that the Chinese are fairly honest in their announcement of plans to develop and take over the administration of Mongolia. That such action violates Russian agreements and the Russian plan for a neutral buffer state is plainly not of much concern in view of the lack of Russian organised government to protect their interests, to be consulted on colonising projects or to keep possible revolutionary activity away from the Mongolian frontier.

How the Chinese government in its weakened state and perplexed as it is can afford to embark on such movements is a puzzle and points to larger commercial and imperial plans from outside sources. Possibly Little Hsu is being given his chance for power far from Peking, for the benefit of himself and his friends of the pro-Japanese clique. Certainly there is enough private capital among the tuchuns to finance such plans without foreign or governmental direct aid. At any rate the War Participation Army, which is said to be drilled up to the minute, is well equipped, and disbandment as demanded by the Southern party becomes less and less probable.

ENLISTMENT IN BRITAIN REPORTED SATISFACTORY

Churchill Issues Statement Dealing With Changing Size Of Army

(Reuter's Service)

London, July 17.—Mr. Winston Churchill, Secretary of State for War, in a memorandum regarding the strength of the Army, says that the rebuilding of the regular army is proceeding satisfactorily and 209,000 volunteer recruits have already been obtained.

If the present rate of enlistment is maintained the probability is that all men who actually fought in the War will be released before April 30, 1920.

Since the Armistice nearly three million men have been demobilised. The aggregate remaining strength, including the volunteer regulars, is 1,200,000. By the end of the year this figure will be reduced by about one half, leaving approximately 600,000 men under arms.

For the present no reduction can be made in the strength of the armies in the Middle East, including Egypt and India. It is hoped, however, that all demobilised men in India will be replaced by regulars by the end of the year. In the case of the Middle East it will be necessary to effect relief by sending drafts released from the Armies of Occupation. These drafts will in turn be regular troops as soon as these are available.

Shanghai Beats Tientsin In Eleven-Inning Battle; Locals And Filipinos Today

Bradley's Single Brings Scott In With Winning Tally; Wilhoit Makes Wonderful Catch; Both Pitchers At Top Form

Bradley's timely single in the 11th inning chased Scott home with the run that beat the 15th Infantry by a 2-1 score. The Shanghai victory came after eleven sessions of baseball—genuine and alleged—that kept the fair crowd on edge throughout the tussle. Both clubs tried to get rid of the game but Bradley's hit over short made it easier for the soldiers. A decision at the plate in the tenth, when Jimmy Logan waved Buckley out on a close play, was another factor in the mixup.

Despite the ridiculous baseball that was noticeable, the game just bristled with features. A wonderful catch by Cy Wilhoit in the sixth, Gill's grab in the ninth and Logan's decision in the tenth had much to do with prolonging the battle. Ward, who played left field for the soldiers for a while, and Buckley conspired to allow Scott to score in the first and succeeded.

Scott deserved to win. He pitched as good a game as has been seen here this season and although Bradley nearly set at naught his hurler's excellent mound performance, and Cooper mussed up an easy grounder at a critical period in the ninth, Scott came through with flying colors. And Scott scored both the Shanghai runs.

The local pitcher allowed five hits. Two were bunched in the sixth before Wilhoit made his great grab and two others came together in the tenth. The sixth-inning bingles figured in the scoring but the only reason for recording the fact is Bradley's catching. The Shanghai captain certainly had an off inning but his single in the eleventh brought forgiveness from the fans.

Wilhoit's Wonderful Catch

Wilhoit's catch in the sixth made possible a double killing that meant the saving of Scott's scalp. Self had led off. He fanned and Bradley allowed the third strike to go nearly to the grand stand. With two strikes on Martin, the latter fouled a fast one and Bradley dropped that after having it in his hands. The lease of life was costly as Martin singled. Even then Glauque should have had Martin at first or Self at second but Glauque was star gazing while the opportunity flit by.

After Gibbens had fanned, Bradley shot the ball to Wilhoit to get Martin off. The throw was low and Wilhoit's beautiful pickup took the curse off the ill-timed throw.

Dupris hit safely to left, scoring Self and moving Martin to third. Dupris went to second on Gill's throw in.

Enter Mr. Wilhoit. Nunns hit a miserable fly of the Texas Leaguer variety to right. Wilhoit had started with the crack of the bat and Glauque was watching Cy go for the ball. While going full speed with his back to the plate, Wilhoit made a catch that looked impossible from the stands. He clutched the ball, turned quickly and shot to Hoffman. Dupris was doubled easily for he was rounding third, figuring the hit as safe as a church.

Up to the sixth Scott had allowed but one hit and the one run lead gained in the first should have carried him through. The tally was gift, too.

How Shanghai Scored

Scott drew four wide ones after Gill had fanned and Wilhoit had rolled to Buckley. Cooper lifted an easy fly for Ward and Scott was loafing along toward third when Ward dropped the ball. The latter threw to Dupris as Scott, now in high, set sail for the plate. Dupris' throw was high—miles too high, and Scott made the first run, the tally that kept him to the fore until his catcher went back on him in the sixth.

But Bradley made up for his errors, even balanced up his instructions that caused Glauque to bunt in the fourth. At the time, there was one out, Smith on first and the weakest hitter on the club, French, on deck. It might also be mentionedthat Smith is not the fastest man in the world on the sacks. Glauque bunted all right, was caught at first and Smith was doubled attempting to go to third. At that, Smith was the man who was playing ball.

Martin, the Tientsin moundman, pitched a nice game. He was touched for but seven hits, fanned ten and lost the game because his team fell down. Errors by Ward, Buckley and Dupris aided and abetted in the Shanghai scoring and had Dupris not erred on Scott's grounder in the eleventh, Bradley would never have had the opportunity to be the hero of the battle.

As it happened, there was one out when Scott was given the life by Dupris' boot. Cooper's infield death moved the pitcher along and then Bradley busted the winning single that called the halt.

Yes, There Were Features

Bradley, Martin, Scott, Gill and Wilhoit were not the only stars. Joe Drinkard went to the grandstand wire for Scott's low foul in the eighth; Horan made a spectacular dive for Glauque's single in the eleventh; Cooper made three difficult stops; Gibbons robbed French of a hit in the second.

Scott, French and Hoffman staged a funny one in the same inning. Scott knocked down Buckley's hot drive but it buzzed through his hands. French ran over and just managed to touch the ball, which was still travelling, slapped it over to where Hoffman could reach it and the latter's throw beat Buckley to the sack.

The other incident that had the fans talking was Jimmy Logan's decision on Buckley at the plate in the tenth. Buckley had doubled and came all the way home on Horan's short single. Smith's peg beat Buckley and the latter made a beautiful book slide with Bradley not watching for the fall-away. Logan waved Buckley out. The umps was closer to the play than the occupants of the press box but Bradley's second attempt to tag Buckley made it look as if the local catcher had missed the runner.

Another decision that brought a growl was when Chapman called Cooper out when the latter attempted to steal second in the ninth. There was no occasion for the kick as the mud stopped Cooper before he ever reached the sack. The play was not even close.

Drinkard was hit on the jaw by a foul tip in the tenth and was literally knocked out. The ball struck him on the point of the jaw and the catcher's knees sagged before he went down. The fans gave him hearty applause when he resumed play after a rest of five minutes.

Crow has dengue fever and was out of the game making a shift in locals' lineup. Cooper played third, French was at second and Glauque played left.

COMMITTEE AT PEKING ENDING WORK ON BUDGET

Draft Of New Constitution Is Proceeding And It May Be Ready In Month

(From Our Own Correspondent)

Peking, July 21.—The Budget for the eighth year has been under investigation and scrutiny by the budget committee of Parliament and is at present near completion. As a result of the scrutiny of the committee, it is announced, the figures for outgo are diminished by $100,000,000. About 20 percent of the military expenses are reduced but the figures still reach some $55,000,000. Financial expenditures of the ministry of finance are cut down largely. It is predicted that more reduction in the expenses will be made when the budget is submitted to the general session.

Owing to the investigation of the budget the Parliament has decided to extend the present session another two months, ending in August. The drafting of the new constitution is proceeding rapidly it is stated and will be ready for presentation to the general conference in another month.

It is reported that General Tuan Chi-jui had signified his support of the proposal to close both the new and old parliaments simultaneously as a compromise between the North and South, leaving President Hsu's position unaffected.

JUDGE LOBINGIER LEAVES ON TRIP TO STATES TODAY

Expects To Be Away For Four Or Five Months

Judge C. S. Lobingier, of the United States Court for China, sails for America today by the steamer Bessie Dollar on a holiday and business trip. He expects to be away about four or five months.

On Monday night at the American Club a "bon voyage" dinner was given by the Far Eastern American Bar Association to the Judge.

Vice-President Fessenden presided and speechs were made by the Judge, who said that he had hoped to get away quietly but greatly appreciated the affair; and by Messrs. Fleming, Bassett, Holcomb and Judge Linebarger, who was elected to active membership and who announced his intention to spend the rest of his life in Shanghai.

On Wednesday night Judge and Mrs. Lobingier were guests of honor at a dinner given by Admiral Rodgers on board the flagship Admiral Alava.

TEETHING TIME NEED NOT MEAN TEARS

When baby's teeth are coming through is a time of worry to many mothers. The little one's gums become swollen and tender; he is cross; does not sleep well; is troubled with constipation, colic or diarrhoea, and sometimes even convulsions seize him.

During this period nothing can equal the use of Baby's Own Tablets, the Canadian children's remedy. They regulate the bowels and stomach, and make the teething so easy that the mother scarcely realizes baby is getting his teeth.

These Tablets are equally healthful and harmless to the youngest infant and the child of eight or more, curing constipation, indigestion, colic, diarrhoea, simple fever and expelling worms.

Baby's Own Tablets are to be had from chemists, also post free at 60 cents the vial from Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., 96 Szechuen Road, Shanghai.

That is the verdict rendered on every can of Certain-teed paint before it leaves the plant. It is the final judgment which is passed upon the accuracy of each process in the manufacture of the paint.

A little thing with a mighty big meaning, because the slightest variation in the proportion of any ingredient, or in the thoroughness and uniformity of grinding and mixing, will throw the scales off balance.

To do things right—to safeguard quality at every step is possible where resources and equipment are available to perfect and standardise the processes of manufacture.

AMERICAN RED CROSS UNDERTAKES BIG TASK

Officials In Siberia Learn World Wide Campaign Of Relief Is To Start

Vladivostok, Siberia, July 12.—Officials of the American Red Cross in Vladivostok have received information from their headquarters in Washington that the American Red Cross has been called upon to undertake a world-wide campaign of relief. This includes not only the establishment of hospitals and the development of medical and nursing assistance on a colossal scale, but the distribution of food, clothing and other necessities of life in more than a dozen countries of Europe and Asia. In Servia, for instance, there has been a terrific scourge of typhus and Poland has suffered scarcely less. Both of these countries have been ravaged for five years by ruthless war and, as a result, the food stocks have been almost wiped out while disease of many kinds has increased alarmingly.

These reports indicate that the American Red Cross must necessarily carry on a much larger relief work in 1919 than previously and must spend very large sums of money in countries not hitherto given relief.

The American Red Cross is now preparing to call for further large contributions from the people of America to aid their suffering brothers abroad. A considerable proportion of the funds thus realised is expected to be allotted to the work of relief in Siberia.

Invalid Czechs Sail On Way To Trieste

Contingent Leaves Voicing Gratitude To Shanghai; Fund Passed $5,000 Mark

The Liverpool Maru with its party of 600 invalided Czecho-Slovak veterans sailed from Shanghai on its way to Trieste yesterday. Before sailing the contingent received outfits of suitable summer wear and was furnished with thousands of cigarettes, suitable food and beverages for the sick and like comforts and necessities through the donations of various individuals and firms here and through the work of the Allied War Relief Association.

The men left with hearty expression of gratitude to the people of Shanghai, in particular for the dinner given in the French Park and for the comforts provided by local organisations. The parting was saddened by the death on board just before sailing yesterday morning of one of the men, who will be buried at sea.

The ship's next stop will be at Singapore.

Mrs. W. H. Lunt, president of the American Woman's Club and the members of the Club, desire to extend thanks to individuals as well as firms contributing food, or money to the success of the dinner given in honor of the Czecho-Slovak soldiers at the French Park on Wednesday afternoon.

Well over the $4,000 asked was subscribed to the fund called for by the Allied War Relief Association—over $5,000 in fact. The following final donations were reported yesterday:

AIR MAILS PRACTICABLE, OFFICIAL TELLS COMMONS

Raynham In Third Attempt At Flight Over Atlantic Again Wrecks His Plane

(Reuter's Service)

London, July 17.—Postmaster-General Albert Illingworth said in the House of Commons today that the question of aerial mails had much occupied the Government's attention, though it had been placed under the Air Force.

The results achieved in flying the Atlantic had been most remarkable, he added, as both Hawker and Alcock had delivered their mails. A very remarkable achievement was the round trip of the R-34. He sent a letter to the Postmaster-General of Canada by the R-34 and shortly after her return received a reply. If this had not made the question of air mails a practical proposition, it had shown there were very great possibilities.

If future progress was as rapid as it had been in the past he though before many years long distance posts would be able to be carried on by either lighter or heavier-than-air machines.

Siberia Red Cross Notes

Vladivostok, July 14.—Captain J. R. Reifsnider, in charge of the thousand wounded and invalid Czechs being taken home from Siberia under the care of the American Red Cross by the steamer Nanking, has cabled local Red Cross headquarters that the Nanking arrived at San Diego safely, with all on board well. From San Diego the Czechs will be taken across the United States and re-embark on the Atlantic side for their long voyage to Trieste, where they will take train for Prague.

Miss Ethel Fonda, who has been head of the application and employment bureau in the department of refugee relief, American Red Cross, at Vladivostok, has left for Novonikolaievsk, Western Siberia. Miss Fonda is from the Japan Chapter, A.R.C., and will go to Novonikolaievsk to take the place of another Japan Chapter member, Miss Gertrude Heywood, who has been in charge of refugee relief at Novonikolaievsk. Miss Heywood's right-hand worker, Miss Alice Cary, is also coming back to Vladivostok shortly, having finished her term of service in Siberia. Misses Cary and Heywood left the west for Vladivostok on July 6. Dr. Doremus Scudder, head of the refugee work in Western Siberia, is returning on the same train.

Three new men have recently been added to the dental department of the American Red Cross. All are expert dentists from the United States. They are Dr. V. D. McConaghie, Dr. Harry Bingman and Dr. J. P. McQuiston. Dr. Bingman has been placed at Irkutsk, Dr. McConaghie at Omsk, and Dr. McQuiston at Vladivostok.

Dr. F. P. Manget, Acting Commissioner to Siberia and Medical Director, who left recently for an inspection trip to Western Siberia, writes from Omsk regarding the great need for hospital supplies among the Russian hospitals in the West. Dr. Manget says that everything pertaining to hospial equipment—glass bottles, cords, instruments, cotton, gauze, muslin—should be sent in as large quantities as possible.

An appeal to the American Red Cross for supplies from the Perm military hospital was answered recently by the Red Cross in sending out a sufficient quantity of necessary hospital articles to last this institution for two or three months. Perm hospital, whose Chief Surgeon is Dr. Anatole Kostenesky, has 420 beds and was opened on December 20 under the Omsk Government. The cases handled are chiefly surgical, about 100 beds being reserved for medical cases. The hospital has been greatly handicapped through the lack of surgical instruments and supplies and the American Red Cross was gratified to be able to relieve some of the suffering by sending out such necessary instruments and supplies as it could secure from its incoming stores.

Officials In Siberia Learn World Wide Campaign Of Relief Is To Start

Vladivostok, Siberia, July 12.—Officials of the American Red Cross in Vladivostok have received information from their headquarters in Washington that the American Red Cross has been called upon to undertake a world-wide campaign of relief. This includes not only the establishment of hospitals and the development of medical and nursing assistance on a colossal scale, but the distribution of food, clothing and other necessities of life in more than a dozen countries of Europe and Asia. In Servia, for instance, there has been a terrific scourge of typhus and Poland has suffered scarcely less. Both of these countries have been ravaged for five years by ruthless war and, as a result, the food stocks have been almost wiped out while disease of many kinds has increased alarmingly.

These reports indicate that the American Red Cross must necessarily carry on a much larger relief work in 1919 than previously and must spend very large sums of money in countries not hitherto given relief.

The American Red Cross is now preparing to call for further large contributions from the people of America to aid their suffering brothers abroad. A considerable proportion of the funds thus realised is expected to be allotted to the work of relief in Siberia.

Invalid Czechs Sail On Way To Trieste

Contingent Leaves Voicing Gratitude To Shanghai; Fund Passed $5,000 Mark

The Liverpool Maru with its party of 600 invalided Czecho-Slovak veterans sailed from Shanghai on its way to Trieste yesterday. Before sailing the contingent received outfits of suitable summer wear and was furnished with thousands of cigarettes, suitable food and beverages for the sick and like comforts and necessities through the donations of various individuals and firms here and through the work of the Allied War Relief Association.

The men left with hearty expression of gratitude to the people of Shanghai, in particular for the dinner given in the French Park and for the comforts provided by local organisations. The parting was saddened by the death on board just before sailing yesterday morning of one of the men, who will be buried at sea.

The ship's next stop will be at Singapore.

Mrs. W. H. Lunt, president of the American Woman's Club and the members of the Club, desire to extend thanks to individuals as well as firms contributing food, or money to the success of the dinner given in honor of the Czecho-Slovak soldiers at the French Park on Wednesday afternoon.

Well over the $4,000 asked was subscribed to the fund called for by the Allied War Relief Association—over $5,000 in fact. The following final donations were reported yesterday:

AIR MAILS PRACTICABLE, OFFICIAL TELLS COMMONS

Raynham In Third Attempt At Flight Over Atlantic Again Wrecks His Plane

(Reuter's Service)

London, July 17.—Postmaster-General Albert Illingworth said in the House of Commons today that the question of aerial mails had much occupied the Government's attention, though it had been placed under the Air Force.

The results achieved in flying the Atlantic had been most remarkable, he added, as both Hawker and Alcock had delivered their mails. A very remarkable achievement was the round trip of the R-34. He sent a letter to the Postmaster-General of Canada by the R-34 and shortly after her return received a reply. If this had not made the question of air mails a practical proposition, it had shown there were very great possibilities.

If future progress was as rapid as it had been in the past he though before many years long distance posts would be able to be carried on by either lighter or heavier-than-air machines.

Siberia Red Cross Notes

Vladivostok, July 14.—Captain J. R. Reitsnider, in charge of the thousand wounded and invalid Czechs being taken home from Siberia under the care of the American Red Cross by the steamer Nanking, has cabled local Red Cross headquarters that the Nanking arrived at San Diego safely, with all on board well. From San Diego the Czechs will be taken across the United States and re-embark on the Atlantic side for their long voyage to Trieste, where they will take train for Prague.

Miss Ethel Fonda, who has been head of the application and employment bureau in the department of refugee relief, American Red Cross, at Vladivostok, has left for Novonikolaievsk, Western Siberia. Miss Fonda is from the Japan Chapter, A.R.C., and will go to Novonikolaievsk to take the place of another Japan Chapter member, Miss Gertrude Heywood, who has been in charge of refugee relief at Novonikolaievsk. Miss Heywood's right-hand worker, Miss Alice Cary, is also coming back to Vladivostok shortly, having finished her term of service in Siberia. Misses Cary and Heywood left the west for Vladivostok on July 6. Dr. Doremus Scudder, head of the refugee work in Western Siberia, is returning on the same train.

Three new men have recently been added to the dental department of the American Red Cross. All are expert dentists from the United States. They are Dr. V. D. McConaghie, Dr. Harry Bingman and Dr. J. P. McQuiston. Dr. Bingman has been placed at Irkutsk, Dr. McConaghie at Omsk, and Dr. McQuiston at Vladivostok.

Dr. F. P. Manget, Acting Commissioner to Siberia and Medical Director, who left recently for an inspection trip to Western Siberia, writes from Omsk regarding the great need for hospital supplies among the Russian hospitals in the West. Dr. Manget says that everything pertaining to hospial equipment—glass bottles, cords, instruments, cotton, gauze, muslin—should be sent in as large quantities as possible.

An appeal to the American Red Cross for supplies from the Perm military hospital was answered recently by the Red Cross in sending out a sufficient quantity of necessary hospital articles to last this institution for two or three months. Perm hospital, whose Chief Surgeon is Dr. Anatole Kostenesky, has 420 beds and was opened on December 20 under the Omsk Government. The cases handled are chiefly surgical, about 100 beds being reserved for medical cases. The hospital has been greatly handicapped through the lack of surgical instruments and supplies and the American Red Cross was gratified to be able to relieve some of the suffering by sending out such necessary instruments and supplies as it could secure from its incoming stores.

BOLSHEVISTS ALLIED WITH AFGHANS, REPORTED

Report Made In Commons That Fighting Has Stopped And Delegates Are Expected

(Reuter's Service)

Copenhagen, July 16.—Newspapers from Moscow state that the Soviet Government has recognised the independence of Afghanistan and that an offensive alliance against Great Britain has been concluded on the Ashkabad front between the Government of Khiva and the Bolshevists.

Pause In Fighting

London, July 16.—In the House of Commons today Mr. E. S. Montagu stated that, except for outpost affairs, there was now no fighting in Afghanistan and there was reason to hope the Afghan peace delegates would arrive in our lines on July 22.

Viscount Curzon asked, "Is it intended to allow the Amir to retain his throne in view of his unprovoked attack on British teritory?"

Mr. E. S. Montagu replied, "Our object is to secure our frontiers against a recurrence of such an unprovoked attack. The Government at present does not intend to express any opinion with regard to who shall be the future ruler of Afghanistan."

Lih Teh Oil Mill Pays 15 Percent

The ninth annual general meeting of the Lih Teh Oil Mill Company, Ltd., was held yesterday afternoon in the offices of the agents, Messrs. A. R. Burkill and Sons. Mr. C. R. Burkill occupied the chair and there were also present Messrs. E. E. Clark, M. Demets, Liu Chang-yin and F. J. Burrett, directors, and shareholders, representing altogether 4,260 shares.

The secretary having read the notice convening the meeting the chairman said:

"Gentlemen, the report and accounts having been in your hands for some time I will follow the usual course and take them as read.

"The directors consider that the result of the year's working is highly satisfactory considering the difficulties of the past season.

"The demand for oils until April, 1919, was poor and owing to freight scarcity, cable delays and high exchange business was very difficult.

"The market in England was entirely cut off on account of the prices fixed by the Government and the continental demand could not be supplied on account of high freight rates and it was not until the last month of the financial year that a good demand was experienced.

"The demand for cake was fairly good throughout the season and the large weekly production found a ready sale to Japan.

"For the first time in many years experience cotton seeds were of good quality and were purchaseable in good condition, which is the most essential point from a crusher's point of view. Supplies of seeds were large and the market was a steady one and we have run the mill almost entirely on cotton seeds since last October.

"The mill has worked satisfactorily and economically and the machinery is in first class order.

"The stocks at the end of the financial year were heavy, but were nearly all sold and waiting for shipment and considerable clearances were made in June and the present month.

"The accounts do not call for any special comment.

"Owing to lack of working capital the directors have followed a conservative course in the division of the profit made during the year and propose:

	Tls.
Dividend of 15%	39,000
Transfer to reserve account (bringing it up to Tls. 100,000)	25,000
Transfer to depreciation account (bringing it up to Tls. 50,000	25,000
Write off bundings and jetties	1,900

"We also propose to pay a bonus of Tls. 2,000 to the staff and again take this opportunity of expressing our appreciation of the good work done by Messrs. Thompson and Joseph Liu.

"If any shareholders have any questions to ask I shall be pleased to answer them."

No questions were asked and the following resolutions were put and unanimously passed:

That the report and accounts, together with the recommendations as to the appropriation of the balance at profit and loss account, as presented be accepted.—Proposed by the chairman, seconded by Mr. E. E. Clark.

That the appointment of Messrs. C. R. Burkill and F. J. Burrett as directors of the company be confirmed.—Proposed by Mr. E. E. Clark, seconded by Mr. Liu Chang-yin.

That Mr. Liu Chang-yin be re-elected a director of the company.—Proposed by the chairman, seconded by Mr. F. J. Burrett.

That Mr. R. C. B. Fennell be re-elected a director of the company.—Proposed by Mr. J. V. C. Davis, seconded by Mr. S. R. Owen.

That the directors' fees be increased to the sum of Tls. 2,000 per annum.—Proposed by Mr. C. R. Burkill, seconded by Mr. E. E. Clark.

That the increase in directors' fees shall be operative for the year ended May 31, 1919.—Proposed by Mr. E. E. Clark, seconded by Mr. F. J. Burrett.

We Have Forgotten

N November, 1912, dealing with the Balkan war the London Times said:

"Who, then, makes war? The answer is to be found in the Chancelleries of Europe, among the men who have too long played with human lives as pawns in a game of chess, who have became so enmeshed in formulas and the jargon of diplomacy that they have ceased to be conscious of the poignant realities with which they trifle. And thus will war continue to be made, until the great masses who are the sport of professional schemers and dreamers say the word which will bring, not eternal peace, for that is impossible, but a determination that wars shall be fought only in a just and righteous and vital cause."

In these days when we have become calloused out of habit to war and its sufferings and have forgotten to think of war in terms of its human cost, it is good to remember that these things were once said and thought. Said and thought by so ardent an advocate of "practical" and "unsentimental" thinking and action in international relations as the London Times. It is equally true now. Only we have forgotten—we who have not suffered.

The Latest Sino-Japanese Incident

THE seriousness of the incident at Changchun canhot be exaggerated. Experience teaches that it will be big with consequences. The Japanese will not let this pass. China will pay.

The most important duty now is immediately to send to the scene of the Chinese-Japanese fracas independent, impartial and competent investigators to take evidence while it is fresh, to sift the evidence and make a carefully considered report. There is in this, as in previous Sino-Japanese incidents of the same character, a vagueness as to what actually transpired. This vagueness must be cleared away. Blame must be fixed where it is due now, while it still can be impartially fixed, not later, when Japan can state its own version of the facts and on that basis make extreme demands for compensation.

From the reports received thus far the Chinese troops are to blame. They were the aggressors. They invaded Changchun, acted unlawfully and precipitated the battle in which Japanese lives were lost. If those reports are verified then China must give satisfaction in accordance with the dictates of international law—but no more. But they should be verified first, and by an impartial body. And the investigation must be made with allowance for the fact that in that part of Kirin, Fengtien and Manchuria generally the Chinese troops are in the control of the Japanese; at least in the control of the Chinese militarists who are seeking Japan's advancement in that part of the continent. Hsu Shu-cheng's recent maneuverings in Manchuria and Mongolia must not be forgotten. And he may not be wholly innocent of this provocation to Japan. He may have been its agent in fact. It is this that neutral investigators must look into.

What Can Good Roads Do For China?

BY LI SEN ZUH
St. John's University
(Prize Essay)

None of us will deny the fact that the circulation of blood is of extreme importance to the health of a man. This is what good roads can do for a country. The Western countries have spent year after year vast sums of money in providing and upkeeping the good roads for no other reason than that the nation's progress largely depends upon the perfection of the means of communication.

As we all know, communication is extremely difficult in China. The main highways are little more than beaten tracks or footpaths which are almost impassable for vehicles and especially in the rainy seasons. Except a few public roads which connect Peking with the remotest regions of the country, the government does not pay any attention to the betterment of communication. Some of these public works are only carried out by the people of the locality. The negligence certainly has far-reaching consequences. We can easily realise the urgent need of good roads, if we consider carefully from the following points of view.

1. Economically: The economic losses due to difficulties of communication are enormous. The money paid for expensive transportation is unproductive. It yields no economical returns but means a tax both upon the merchants and buyers. But as the means of communication improves, the cost of carrying goods from one place to another is naturally decreased. Local goods will then be worth more, because they can be accessible to a wider market. Thus we shall find a decided increase in local production of all kinds. China is rich in raw materials. As soon as we improve our system of transportation, important industrial changes are bound to take place.

2. Commercially: Wide commerce is impossible unless we have good transportation facilities. Raw materials must be sent to manufacturers and the manufactured goods to various places. Cheap, reliable and rapid means of transportation are necessary for that very reason. Commerce is limited in China, because the transportation facilities are in primitive condition. During recent years railroads have been built. But good roads are feeders of railways. A system of railways without good roads is imperfect and inefficient. They can be fully utilised only when we have good branches. The commercial importance of having good roads, therefore, should not be overlooked. We must try our best to promote a perfect system of transportation in order that we may develop a wide commerce and increase our country's wealth.

3. Intellectually: We have often heard our foreign friends say that the Chinese are conservative. Are we really so? The question is not very difficult to answer, if we simply realise the difficulties of communication here in China. To travel from one place to another is not an easy thing, although it is now comparatively easier than in former days. Non-intercourse therefore is the real source of conservatism. The free interchange of new ideas and the wide diffusion of education will certainly make us more progressive.

4. Socially: Social reforms can be easily carried out throughout the country if the means of transportation are perfect. Social disturbance will be greatly lessened as material prosperity increase through the development of commerce. Furthermore, China has been suffering from famine for many years. Surplus supplies of other regions cannot be easily transported to the place where the people are on the edge of starvation. In order to carry out the relief work rapidly and efficiently and to save millions of innocent lives, the construction of good roads should be proceeded with without any delay.

5. Politically: The history of the United States at the beginning of the 19th century gives us a very good instance showing the danger of poor means of communication on account of lack of good roads. The sectional feeling was so strong that it caused the separation and great civil war between the North and South. The condition was somewhat similar to that of China today. The unification of China as a nation depends upon good roads. China is not at all united. Just think of the different kinds of dialects used in the country. The Cantonese speaks a sort of language which cannot be readily understood by the people of Peking and so with other provinces. The reason is due to non-intercourse which is a direct result of lack of good means of communication. The building of good roads, therefore, is the best way to ensure a general diffusion of prosperity, the strengthening of a national feeling and the promise of a united people to resist foreign attack or domestic political unrest. Let us bring every part of our republic more closely together through a perfect system of good roads.

Viewed from the above, we can see, without any difficulty, that in order to have economical, commercial, intellectual, social and political improvements in our country, the need of building good roads is imperative. We must try, with the help of our government, to construct and maintain a perfect and efficient system of communication, that is, to build good roads in China.

Indian Woman Expresses Dislike Of America

That Western civilisation is destroying all that is beautiful in life, and that Americans are so bound by machinery-made customs and institutions that there is no real culture in the United States, is the opinion of Begum Fyze Rahamin, a member of the Fyzee family of Bombay, who is returning to her home in India after a trip to America, says the Japan Advertiser.

Begum Fyzee Rahamin accompanied her sisters, Her Highness, the Begum of Janjira, and Zahra Begum Fybee, and her husband, Mr. Fyzee Rahamin, on this trip to America. Mr. Fyzee Rahamin is an interpreter of the ancient art of India, and as such is hailed by the critics of Paris and London as one of the foremost artists of India. His paintings are now being exhibited in California. Zahra Begum is well-known in the literary world of Europe as a poetess.

Begum Fyzee Rahamin is herself a woman of note, and during her visit to America spoke a great number of times in the interest of reviving the philosophies and arts which are conducive to a cultured life. She is vitally interested also in the establishment of an Academy of Indian Music, which will keep alive the music of her motherland, the oldest in the world.

Their Freedom A Myth

"Americans call themselves free, and American women call themselves free, when in reality they are more bound by convention than any other people in the world. We Indian women have a great deal more freedom, in the higher sense of the word, than American women have. We are free to think for ourselves, where American women are slaves to convention. The whole country is in the grip of institutions and is a godless place. I don't know what the world is coming to, for this Western civilisation is fact coming to the Orient. There is very little of the real Orient left, and soon I fear there will be none.

Chewing Gum And Jazz

"I went to Niagara Falls, and to the Grand Canyon, and to many other beautiful places in America, but nowhere could I get away from the chewing gum, the jazz music, and the latest fox-trot from New York, New York, of course, leads the nation, and the rest of the country follows. There is no originality, no individuality. And then the Americans boast of freedom!

"But among them I found many, many women who desired to reduce their life to more simplicity, many charming women who would live more simply, more in tune with nature, but they are so bound by custom and convention and the horrid institutions that they do not know how to begin."

Charity Begins At Home

Begum Fyzee Rahamin has a rather novel and breathtaking view of such institutions as churches, hospitals and charitable institutions. Her viewpoint is that of the Oriental as yet untainted with Occidental civilisation.

"If homes were run as they were meant to be run, there would be no need for these institutions," she says. "Just look at the way people live in New York, in tiny apartments, getting their meals out at some restaurant. It is no home, and to my mind not at all the proper way to live. There is no leisure in America, no time for culture or the finer things of life."

Begum Fyzee Rahamin expects to return to America next year some time in order to found a society for the simplification of life, an organisation for which numerous American friends have expressed a desire.

Trotsky On Himself

An Account Of Bolshevism By Its Leader

(From The Westminster Gazette)

It is impossible, at any rate for the non-Russian reader, to relate to any known history this breathless narrative (The History of the Russian Revolution to Brest-Litovsk) of what appears to be a blind struggle for power over the ruins of a defeated and distracted country. Trotsky describes with great animation how he and his friends succeeded in destroying the Provisional Government and preventing any sort of compromise between what is vaguely called the "proletariat" and the "bourgeoisie," a term which apparently includes all men of education and experience. They did so mainly by branding any moderating influence as "counter-revolutionary," and raising the mob against it. There were, no doubt, then as now, a certain number of genuine counter-revolutionaries in Russia, but in 1917 they were so discredited and exhausted that a combination of the revolutionaries to make a working Government must have left them powerless and harmless. However imperfectly and timidly, the Mensheviki who had played the leading role in overthrowing the Tsardom were laboring for this result. But this did not suit the Bolshevists. They were out for the "class-war," fanatically conceived as an object in itself. "The Mensheviki," says Trotsky, "had passed through the Marxian school, and had derived from it certain methods and habits which had helped them to find their way sufficiently in the political situation to adulterate 'scientifically' the real meaning of the present class struggle, and to secure, in the highest degree possible under the given conditions, the supremacy of the Liberal bourgeoisie." This seems to mean, so far as we can gather from the context, that the Mensheviki wanted order and peace, and to that end sought assistance of a certain number of "bourgeois" persons, who had experience of administration or studied the art of government. Curiously enough, the Bolsheviki themselves when they came to power wanted exactly the same sort of assistance, and Trotsky himself is full of complaints that the very "bourgeois" bureaucracy upon whom he had declared a war a outrance declined to work for him. It was a crime for the Mensheviki to employ the bourgeoisie, it was a crime for the bourgeoisie not to work with the Bolsheviki. In the Bolshevik scheme the "bourgeoisie" was to serve unconditionally under the dictatorship of the proletariat. In the Menshevik scheme it was to have had a voice in affairs and the same rights as the proletariat. Any attempt to compromise with the bourgeoisie, M. Trotsky keeps insisting, "would have led the Revolution into a bog." Into what sort of a bog has it been led by the fanatical outlawry which was the adopted policy?

But the interest which this narrative possesses is less in its description of the events which led up to the overthrow of the Provisional Government than in the light which it throws upon the Bolshevik state of mind. What, at the end of it all, are the Bolsheviki?

But what is the "proletariat?" It is, so far as we can discover, the section of the working-class which supports the Bolsheviki. "The proletariat," he says in one place, "led the army and the peasantry; and elsewhere it is made clear that a great many of the peasantry and a great many of the town workers refused to follow "the proletariat." But perhaps we come nearest the true theory in the passage in which Trotsky excuses the violent dissolution of the Constituent Assembly when it showed a majority against the Bolsheviki. Let us quote one passage:

"As Marxists, we have never been worshippers of formal democracy. In a society split into classes, the democratic institutions, far from abolishing the class struggle, only lend the class interests a highly imperfect form of expression. The possessing classes have always at their disposal thousands of means to pervert and adulterate the will of the laboring masses. In time of revolution democratic institutions form a still less perfect apparatus for the expression of the class struggle. Marx called Revolution "the locomotive of history." The open and direct struggle for power enables the laboring masses to acquire in a short time a wealth of political experience and thus rapidly to pass from one stage to another in the process of their mental evolution. The ponderous mechanism of democratic institutions cannot keep pace with this evolution—and this in proportion to the vastness of the country and the imperfection of the technical apparatus at its disposal."

On this principle you can never get a representative assembly. Democracy will always have changed its mind before the assembly which it elected last week can get to work. Who, then, is to interpret its mind? The answer seems to be, a select group of people who assume themselves to have an infallible intuition into the changing and evolving moods of the laboring masses. These are the dictators, and this is the "dictatorship of the proletariat." In effect, as this narrative shows, it was the seizure of power by a group which succeeded in getting the larger number of soldiers and machine-guns on to their side. The reasoning and the process were entirely Prussian, and the intellectual conceit which enables the "dictator of the proletariat" to believe that he is the true interpreter of the popular will is not, in essence, at all different from that of the German War Lord. We see these two egotisms at clash in what is the most interesting part of this book, the account of the negotiations at Brest-Litovsk between Bolshevik and German. Each tried to out-maneuver the other in the best style of the old diplomacy; and Trotsky specially prides himself on having seen through the wiles of German militarism, and having, vulgarly speaking, put it in a hole.

This book was written in February, 1918, and we wonder whether, after fourteen months, the writer of it is quite so certain that he can get on without the despised bourgeois and intellectuals, or whether the Mensheviki were as wrong as he supposed in desiring to build a bridge between classes. "The Revolution," he says, at the end of this book, "has raised in an acute form the question of private property in land and the means of production—that is, the question of the life and death of the exploiting classes. Politically, this means a constant—sometimes covert, sometimes overt—bitter civil war. In its turn, civil war necessarily brings in its train anarchist tendencies in the movement of the laboring masses." The laboring masses are mostly starving, and the anarchist tendencies, so far as we can judge, have been exhibited not by them but by their dictators. After a year "the rational universal plan of organisation of production" looks more remote then ever, and the "proletarian revolution" in other countries, to which Trotsky looks for relief, is much more likely, if it comes, to plunge them into the same troubles than to help Russia. The gleam of light in this book is that it helps us to believe that the writer is less a villain than a fanatic. On this hypothesis the question comes back to us, whether we have gone the right way about to abate the conditions which breed fanaticism in Russia, or whether, on the contrary, we are not doing a great many things that inevitably increase it.

Weighing Light

Both the British expeditions sent out to observe the total solar eclipse of May 29 limited their activities largely to one problem—that of "weighing light." What this means is explained by Prof W. W. Campbell, of Lick Observatory, in his "Solar Eclipse Notes," in The Publications of the Astronomical Society of the Pacific (San Francisco). He

For one green leaf; so thick the bloom,
So filled with rain, it seemed to make
A little, spreading, azure lake . . .
And I remembered, all my years,
Those blossoms hung with April's tears.

Who knows what Memory will bind,
So careless—or so subtly kind,
As when she shut within her palm,
For me, this reminiscent balm!

No Servant Problem In Palestine

Palestine is one place in the world which has no "Servant Problem," according to Miss Evangeline Metheny of Beaver Falls, Pa., just returned to the United States from Red Cross service in the Holy Land.

"The servants in Palestine," says Miss Metheny, who has lived there most of her life, "are a different set entirely from the servants we have here in America. They make their services personal; their interest in their employer's affairs is personal whereas the American servant regards it impersonally.

"In Palestine, if I were to tell my house servants that there would be ten people in for dinner, they would be delighted. It would be a matter of personal pride with them that their dinner was the best to be had, and their service, too. They would be happy at the thought of working for a mistress who had so many friends that she could get together ten at one time. There would be no sulky looks or actions at the extra work; every servant would cooperate and the dinner would go off grandly.

"Here the mention of an extra guest or two creates a feeling of resentment. I know people who do not dare to invite a dinner guest until they have obtained permission from their cooks. Cooks in Palestine consider extra guests a compliment to their art. The servants in Palestine would ten times rather work for Americans than for the native population. The reason is not alone that we will pay higher wages—we treat them better. For one thing, American women do not swear at them, and native women do. They call down every kind of curse on the servant's eyes, and his children, and his grandchildren; they say the most untranslatable things as a matter of course. It is not in the least unusual, it is quite au fait for an Arab woman to swear so."

Servants in Palestine may be different, but a woman is a woman the world over, Miss Metheny says with Kipling and other authorities.

"Once in a railroad train," she says, "I was sitting in the same compartment with an old native woman. In the East there are separate carriages for men and women. In our coach there was a particularly pretty girl and from time to time a young English or American man passed through, watching her. My old woman was kneeling on the seat with her shoes off, praying. In order to pray toward Mecca she had to kneel crosswise on the narrow seat, and the rite of bumping her head on the floor several times in each prayer was an acrobatic feat under such circumstances. Every time the young man came into the carriage she had to struggle for balance while she pulled her veil down over her face. Finally she spoke to him. "My son," she said "do you not know that you have no right in here with the protected ones" (women).

He apologised, and she raised her veil when he went out.

"You know," she said to me in Arabic, "if I had any teeth left I would not pull down my veil. I only do it that people will think there is a nice face behind it."

The Ideal Employer

By Eleanor Gilbert

A wide-awake British periodical is arousing some interest in business circles by a recently inaugurated contest as to who is the best employer. By best is not meant the biggest, of course. It might be that the biggest employers, that is to say, the employers of the largest number of people, might be the worst from the standpoint of humane and reasonable management.

But it seems to me that such a contest would do more to disseminate information about good management and to stir employers into better methods than any other one thing. Publicity, or fame, as you prefer to call it, is one of the best incentives for work the world over.

The desire to be distinguished stirs many a lazy man or woman into a use of their neglected abilities. Statesmen, artists and workers in the various crafts are stimulated into greater activity by the desire to become distinguished. When a rival appears they throw greater energy into work, hoping to outdistance him.

There are already in America a few employers who have achieved distinction within certain circles for their intelligent management. I could name at least three business men who are known internationally because their organisations are managed with the interests of the employes in view primarily. And I should say that the "best" employer was the one who operated his business so that the interests of those who worked were served fully as well as the public they supplied.

Of course the first function of a business is to render a service to the public. That is what business is for. But next in importance is the well-being of the actual workers, the tens of hundreds or thousands of men and women who do the real work. Finally, some reward is due to the men on top, those who initiated or manage the enterprise.

Where employes are meanly paid or badly managed it is usually because positions are reversed—the profits to the management are given first place, public second, and employes last. This is not true merely of large enterprises. We hear about big business in its malefactions because the magnitude of the offense makes it conspicuous. But I believe that there are many more mean spirited employers among the small business men because dealing in smaller sums they feel impelled to squeeze the dollar more.

I should like to see a national competition in America for honors to be awarded to the "best" employer—he who offered to employes the greatest incentive for promotion and progress, who made working conditions reasonably comfortable, who paid them well enough to enable each one, even the humblest, to live pleasantly. And not only his name but his methods should then be advertised broadcast so that everyone who employs would be stimulated to do likewise.

You think it difficult to make such a decision? The employes and the employer themselves would tell. Find out from the employer the actual number of new people he has to hire each year and how many people resign and why; ask the employes are they happy at work. The contented employes would soon enough be heard in the silence of the great army of unhappy workers.

Eat A Good Breakfast

By Brice Belden, M. D.

Breakfast should be the best meal of the day, and if one has not injured his health in some way, as by dissipation or overeating, he will have a good appetite in the morning. Such an appetite is an excellent sign of good health.

After the hours of rest following the day's work there should be a strong desire to break one's fast. But very many people are accustomed to take for breakfast a roll, a cup of coffee and perhaps some fruit. They seem to believe that the digestive organs are not prepared in the morning to assimilate a good meal, and it is true that they frequently have but little appetite at that time, owing to some fault of their own.

The remarkable engine known as the human body cannot be run without fuel. Coffee is a stimulant and contains nothing capable of supplying heat units. Yet it is relied upon to start the engine in the morning. It is as though one were to give an automobile containing no gasoline or oil a good shove and expect it to run for several hours.

The scanty and hurried breakfast is detrimental to health and unfits a person for the morning's work. People who retain their health under such circumstances do so in spite of their habits and because they are gifted with considerable reserve vitality.

The noontime meal should be small and made up of easily digested articles. A heavy meat meal at this time is apt to make one sleepy and inactive in the afternoon. People who eat a scanty breakfast are apt to overeat at noontime.

After a hearty breakfast, unless one takes far more exercise than the average citizen gets, appetite and digestive power are tempered to the reduced needs of the body. It therefore follows that a heavy meal is not required in the evening, unless one has performed hard manual labor.

In conclusion, it cannot be reiterated too strongly that breakfast should be the best meal of the day.

PIGEONS TO GUARD FORESTS

Navy Finds New Use For Its Efficient Bird Branch

New York.—As an aid in the protection of forests from fires the Navy Department has offered to establish pigeon lofts in the forest preserves and to provide the forest airplane patrol with carrier pigeons, whose duty it would be to carry messages direct to relief stations whenever the aviator, high in the air, discovered a fire. This announcement was made yesterday by the Manufacturers' Aircraft Association. This service would not only give employment to war pigeons, but it would develop the training of birds and give incentive to the breeding of the best.

The pigeon branch of the navy is expanding under the direction of Lieutenant McAtee, and recruits are sought for the service. It has 2,500 birds, so that plenty are available for the forest patrol. Experiments are going on constantly in the effort to increase the efficiency of the birds which took an important part in naval warfare overseas. It has been proved that pigeons can fly at a speed at least equal to that of a seaplane or flying boat. The following instance occurred only a few days ago. There are two naval mail boats traveling each way daily between Washington and Anacostia. One of these boats made a forced landing midway between the stations. Two messenger pigeons from the naval air stations at Hampton Roads were released, reached the station and delivered their notes, spare parts were at once despatched, and the mail boat proceeded on its way to Washington.

One of the novel uses to which the airplane is now being put is that of locating pestilential swamps and marshes. The Navy Department reports that Ensign Van Court of Hampton Roads recently made a successful trip along the North Carolina coast, in the vicinity of Morehead City, for the purpose of spying out territory which should be drained or purified. Van Court's job particularly was to find the breeding places of mosquitos, and as these are discovered steps are taken by sanitation engineers for their elimination.
